- 13.2 The size of any GPRS Data is dependent on the technical capabilities of Your Handset. - 15.2 Your mobile telephone number will be quarantined for a period of six months after Your Service has been disconnected. Your mobile telephone number will be reallocated six months after Your Service has been disconnected.

16. Credit Expiry

- 16.1 If Your Service is supplied with an initial amount of Prepaid Credit then that Prepaid Credit will be valid from the time Your Service is activated and will expire after the Credit Expiry Period applicable to Recharge Amounts which are the same amount as Your initial Prepaid Credit. The date on which Your initial Prepaid Credit expires will be treated as Your first Credit Expiry Date.
- 16.2 On each Credit Expiry Date, any Prepaid Credit remaining on Your account as at that date will expire. Once Prepaid Credit has expired, You will forfeit it and cannot use it subsequently. Prepaid Credit can never be redeemed for cash.
- 16.3 Different Credit Expiry Periods and Prepaid Credit amounts apply to different Recharge Amounts. The Credit Expiry Period and Prepaid Credit amount applicable to a particular Recharge Amount is outlined in the terms of Your Plan.
- 16.4 If You recharge Your account with a Cap Recharge Amount, then (unless You are already on a Prepaid Crazy Cap), Your Plan will be changed to a Prepaid Crazy Cap and each of the following will occur:
- (a) Any unexpired Prepaid Credit remaining on Your account at that time will be forfeited, regardless of whether You were on a Prepaid Crazy Plan or a Prepaid Crazy Cap when You recharged;
 - (b) You will be allocated a new amount of Prepaid Credit equal to the amount specified for the relevant Recharge Amount in Your Plan; and

 - (iii) the new Credit Expiry Date will follow the date on which You recharged by the number of days equal to the Credit Expiry Period applicable to the relevant Recharge Amount (as stated in Your Plan).
 - (b) If You were already on a Prepaid Crazy Plan when You recharged, then:
 - (i) any unexpired Prepaid Credit remaining on Your account at the time You recharged will be increased by the Prepaid Credit amount specified for the relevant Recharge Amount in Your Plan; and

- (ii) the Credit Expiry Date for any unexpired Prepaid Credit will be extended by a number of days equal to Credit Expiry Period applicable to the Recharge Amount by which You are recharging. The new Credit Expiry Date will apply to the Prepaid Credit specified for the Recharge Amount by which You are recharging, as well as to any unexpired Prepaid Credit remaining on Your account at the time You recharge. However, Your Credit Expiry Date will never be extended to a date that is more than 730 days after the date You recharge.

16.6 When You recharge Your account and that results in any Prepaid Credit being forfeited by You, that Prepaid Credit is forfeited permanently and cannot be recovered regardless of any amounts by which You may subsequently recharge Your account. You should therefore take care in specifying the amount by which You recharge to avoid an unexpected loss of Prepaid Credit.
